Abstract—Rabindranath Tagore, a prolific Indian English author, mainly known for his poetic collection 'Gitanjali' and his presentation of human nature through the different characters of his works. Being an Indian author, Tagore presents human emotions like greed, lust, betrayal etc. in his works. It is believed that man is a bundle of desires that desires make him dissatisfied and unhappy. Many saints and sages advise people to follow the path of yoga and meditation to renounce other worldly pleasures. Like today's Babas, Tagore's Sanyasi uses hyperbolic language to attract people and declares that he is free of any worldly pleasures. Later on, Sanyasi proves lusty when he tries to get the love of a girl called Vasanti. There are many examples of hypocrite Babas like Swami Nityananda, Asharam Bapu, Gurmeet Ram Rahim Singh, Rampal etc. Many of them are indulged in sex rackets and black magic and such Babas' are in imprisonment for their misdeeds. This paper is a sincere attempt to evaluate Tagore's play from today's perspective and to show how so-called Babas' beguile common man.

Keywords—Beguile, betrayal, hypocrite, lust, perspective, Sanyasi.
