Abstract: The COVID-19 pandemic has enormously affected everyday life in its social, cultural, economic and political dimensions. After about a year of living with this pandemic, the emergence of vaccines is hope in the sense that the control of the pandemic will finally be achieved and, consequently, there will be a return to certain normality in terms of interaction, which will not be the same as in the past, in our opinion. This presentation analyses the impacts that COVID-19 may have in the future, focusing, in particular, in the centrality of digital sustainability on ultra-peripheral communities, which are geographically distant from the centres of political and economic decision-making.

Keywords— COVID-19, Post-COVID-19, ultraperipheral regions, impacts on ultraperipheral communities, digital transformation.
